It was shortly after Gus Hightower was honorably discharged from the Air Force, that he made a drive to Montana in search of a new life. As a photographer/writer for the military Public Information Office, the young man enjoyed writing and decided to follow his dream that of becoming a newspaper reporter. Because of an unsuspecting restaurant robbery, he found himself in the middle of a big news story that led him to Abner Wooley, Editor/Publisher of the Daily Chronicle. He's given the trial job of reporter. Hightower's writing ability quickly proves it self in his excellent writing ability.

Hightower's career started to escalate rapidly within the business, as he found himself chasing story after story. Each challenge was another stepping stone in his creative writing career.

Along the way, he also found romance and the new love of his life, a pretty schoolteacher that Gus ultimately marries. But tragedy strikes! On the return trip, from his honeymoon, the plane crashes and kills his bride. But, despite the adversities in his life, Hightower rebuilds his mental state and moves on building his successful career.

Turning the pages, you'll find laughter, tears, intrigue and mystery. The writer, Keith Bombard, has made this enjoyable reading that will be enjoyed by all mature readers. This book is not recommended for children.
