Job-hunting and the terrifying interview process that follows must be one of the most stressful and intimidating features of modern life. Long gone are the days when an individual could walk into an interview unprepared, land a job with prospects and gently climb the ladder until he or she retired.

Now, the modern job-seeker must compete tooth and nail against dozens of other candidates for almost any position and they must learn to build their careers from the ground up – often having to pass through several different jobs and several different companies to get there.

With all this difficulty associated with landing a dream job, it is vital that if you do manage to land an interview for a position you want, that you do your very best to stand out and impress any potential employer. The pressure is enormous.

Fortunately, this guide exists to overcome that struggle. Learn how to become more employable by knowing and cultivating the employable traits and qualities that employers are seeking for. Become familiar with the most common and challenging interview questions, what these questions are testing and how to provide strong, intelligent answers to them. Finally, get advice on all the aspects of job you may have forgotten and overlooked, such as how to dress well or get over interview nerves, in order to make sure that when you go for that destined interview, you snatch that job away from the other candidates and for yourself.
