The Tehran, Yalta and Potsdam Conferences: Documents

"The book contains Soviet records of the negotiations between Stalin, Roosevelt and Churchill at the Tehran and Yalta Conferences, and between Stalin, Truman and Attlee at the Potsdam Conference. The documents enable the reader to realise the whole extent of the co-operation between the three Great Powers in the anti-nazi coalition during the war. The documents bear out the Soviet Union's loyalty to the ideas of peace, democracy and progress and its tireless campaign for a just settlement of post-war problems in the interests of peoples, for achieving European security, creating the conditions rendering impossible the rebirth of militarist forces in Germany and a repetition of aggression, and for the development of international co-operation and securing the right of every nation to determine their destiny independently. In the light of the present-day international situation the book is not only of tremendous historical interest but is topically significant. In the USSR, the documents included in the book were first published in the journal 'International Affairs' over the period 1961-1966."
