Have you ever wondered what makes some people so much more successful than others, than you? The answer is fairly basic and simple – they are curious, adventurous, and unsatisfied with the status quo. Put simply, successful people ask a very basic question – what next. Successful people view life as an adventure and look for ways to keep the adventure going. As one goal is achieved they move on quickly already having identified their next goal because they are constantly searching for new challenges, new adventures – what next. Sometimes described as crazy and unfocused, successful people often take risks and juggle multiple projects at one time. But while they seem unfocused they are often very organized and driven, able to prioritize the many tasks they take on. When one of those tasks, one of those risks lead to success, crazy suddenly turns to visionary. Through examples of very successful and famous people as well as ordinary people who have been successful, What Next A Proactive Approach to Success provides a framework for you to seek out new challenges, to be opportunistic, rather than waiting for opportunities to come to you. “What Next” is a proactive approach to success. Asking what next and answering it with action is the only sure path to your dreams and desires. There are no secrets or steps to success without hard work. There is no progress without movement. If you never ask the question – What next – the answer will always be the same – nothing.
