The book Out of the Blackness: The Black Tear is a book that speaks for itself. It's based on a Bio of me being a father black woman and how it affects me. Through out my years not knowing until one day God came my way. Asking me if I'm a good woman why don't I have a man. That I love and not only love one whom I can work situations out with. It touches on how a woman can claim to be a good one. But doesn't realize she has issues unknowingly. Also it's not just about having a man it's about keeping him. Without just sex involve it speaks on friends who go through hell from there own father ways when one is around. It recapes on people you just shouldn't be around even if you love them. Which goes for family friends or co-workers. It's a wake up call from any woman who has a man that she sleeps with. Even if it's only once because that one time she can contract Aids which these stories have came my way. In many words you would have your mouth open giving dam she right.
